

Intellectual Property Law & Technology Program

IP Osgoode: Call for IPilogue Editors (Summer 2010)

IPilogue is a blog populated with entries from students at Osgoode Hall Law School as well as postings from guest bloggers around the globe. Students from other law schools are also welcome to contribute, and the IPilogue team currently includes students from the University of Ottawa and the University of Toronto (<http://www.iposgoode.ca/ipilogue-editors/>).

The blog contains comments and thoughts about current pressing intellectual property, technology, privacy and related legal issues (see the blog at www.iposgoode.ca).

IP Osgoode invites applications for the following summer positions:

Positions Available:

- IPilogue Editor (10-12 positions)

Term: May 2010-August 2010

Time Demands: Estimated average of 3-4 hours per week (1 blog post every two weeks)

Qualifications:

- An interest in learning about current IP law and technology issues
- Ability to write in a concise and clear manner
- Respect/openness for differing opinions and balanced issue analysis

Application Process:

Please provide the following materials via email to iposgoode@osgoode.yorku.ca by Wednesday, March 31, 2010:

- One page cover letter (briefly outlining your interests in IP law)
- One 250 word writing sample (in the form of an example of a comment that you might make on a current existing IPilogue blog post)
- One copy of your resume and unofficial grades

Please send any questions you may have to: iposgoode@osgoode.yorku.ca

Osgoode Hall Law School, York University,
4700 Keele Street, Toronto, Ontario, M3J 1P3
www.iposgoode.ca • 416.650.8449 • iposgoode@osgoode.yorku.ca

