

KEVIN DONOVAN, THE STAR

THE LAW AND ETHICS OF INVESTIGATIVE JOURNALISM.

Kevin Donovan is the longest serving investigative reporter at The Star. He is also an editor and runs the Star's I-Team. Kevin led the coverage of the Jian Ghomeshi and Mayor Rob Ford stories, and his series on child protection problems with colleague Moira Welsh led to a new law in Ontario. Kevin has investigated government, charities, businesses, lawyers, doctors and many other groups and individuals. His investigation of the ORNGE air ambulance service led to an overhaul of the agency, along with probes by government and the police. Other stories have led to the creation of new prescription drug policies to protect the public, and the exposure of backroom deals by officials at all levels of government.

OCTOBER 25, 2017

OSGOODE HALL
LAW SCHOOL
Wed, October 25, 2017
Room 2001
12:30pm - 2:30pm

As part of Osgoode Hall Law School's program in Law & Journalism, The Star's Kevin Donovan will join us to explore the many challenges of investigative journalism, including legal and ethical concerns. This event will also include a Q&A period hosted by Osgoode Professor Jamie Cameron.

Contact: Ian Stedman
ianstedman@osgoode.yorku.ca

Co-Sponsors:
McLaughlin College,
the York Centre for Public Policy and Law at Osgoode and the York Collegium for Practical Ethics.

