Getting Profits From Patents: An Interview with Ed Fan and Loreto Grimaldi

April 3, 2014 by Adam Falconi

The course Legal Values: Commercializing Intellectual Property is being offered for the first time at Osgoode Hall Law School this winter term. The IPilogue sat down with Adjunct Professors, Ed Fan (Torys LLP, Partner) and Loreto Grimaldi (MedAvail Technologies Inc., CEO & General Counsel) to talk about this unique course.

As the business world increasingly relies on an information-based economy, intellectual property (IP) will be more important than ever for entrepreneurs and lawyers alike. The Commercializing IP seminar course attempts to provide students with some insights into the ramifications of IP in the business world by exploring the many ways in which a business can use their IP strategically to ensure successes and profitability.

Draft articles regarding the protection of traditional knowledge (TK) will be sent to the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) next autumn. This exciting news comes during a key meeting at WIPO where indigenous peoples have been able to discuss the definition of TK, its use in the public domain, and its application to the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples (click here for the full article). The IPilogue will be sure to comment on the developments to come.

Court Rejects Class Action Settlement in Long-Standing Copyright Dispute Between Lawyers and Legal Publisher

April 3, 2014 by David Bowden

An Ontario Superior Court has rejected a class action settlement between the publisher Thomson Reuters and a collection of Canadian lawyers and law firms, stating that the proposed settlement is not “fair, reasonable, or in the best interests of the Class Members.” The proposed settlement would have seen Thomson Reuters fund a trust for public interest litigation, and would have provided counsel with contingency fees, but included no compensation for class members and the imposition of a non-exclusive licence allowing the publisher’s use of lawyers’ written materials.

Intellectual Property Rights in Non-Genetically Engineered Plant Species

April 3, 2014 by Corey McClary

In the past, Monsanto has been successful in defending the company's patents concerning the genes and modified cells present in genetically modified (GM) plants in both the United States and in Canada. Are Monsanto's new products going to be a hot topic of debate? Likely yes, but maybe not for the reasons you would expect.

The Academy Awards Selfie Rights Debate

April 3, 2014 by Denise Brunsdon

Copyright ownership in Ellen Degeneres' famous Oscar Twitter Selfie, which holds the record for most retweets, might be unclear, but for the average citizen sharing the picture, it doesn't matter much. Canada's fair dealing and the United States' fair use exemptions cover the most common types of sharing and dissemination of the image.
