Part 1: Transplanting the Canadian UGC Exception to Hong Kong

February 6, 2014 by Peter Yu

In July 2013, the Hong Kong government conducted a public consultation on the treatment of parody under the copyright regime. Building on two earlier consultations on digital copyright reform in December 2006 and April 2008, this latest consultation identified three legislative options: (1) clarifying the threshold for criminal copyright infringement; (2) introducing a specific criminal exemption for parody, satire, caricature, pastiche or similar work; and (3) introducing a fair dealing exception for these types of works.

"Meringue" is not an Ingredient in Lemon

Meringue Pie: Defining "Identical Medicinal Ingredient"

February 3, 2014 by Corey McClary

What do cooking and chemistry have in common? Apparently, the former provides great analogies to explain the latter. Apotex has recently applied for judicial review of a decision of the Director General of the Therapeutic Products Derivative (TPD) concerning its generic drug, Apo-Telmisartan. While several issues were raised in the application, of particular interest was a debate over the definition of the term "identical medicinal ingredients" in the Food and Drug Regulations (FDR) (C.08.001.1).

IP Intensive Program: Taking a Look Behind the Wizard's Curtain – A Semester at the Canadian Intellectual Property Office

February 3, 2014 by Adam Del Gobbo

Off in the far-away land of our nation's capital (actually, across the river in Gatineau, Quebec, to be specific) exists a mystical place. A building where applications are examined, rights are granted, and hearings are heard. I spent the better part of a semester at this office, and the experience I had there will without a doubt assist me in becoming a better and more compassionate lawyer in the future.

IP Intensive Program: A Semester at Socan

February 5, 2014 by Fraser Turnbull

In ten weeks at Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers \(SOCAN\) I learned how to gamble on horses, how to create a shark costume out of an old sweater and some cardboard, the proper amount of food to eat at a Chinese buffet (three plates, including dessert), and to always fill out the Health and Fitness ballot (this intern won a hand-held massager!). Oh, and I also learned a lot about practising law.

No Beer and No TV Makes Judge Levy $10M fine for Simpsons, Family Guy Streaming

February 5, 2014 by Denise Brunsdon

Who controls the British Crown? Who keeps illegal streaming down? The Federal Court of Canada does! (May the pop-culture references commence.) The Federal Court of Canada made international news by handing down one of the harshest copyright sentences in its history, a fine of over $10M. The defendant is only 23 years old.
